

MRS. MAYBRICK IN THE HOME OF THE SISTERS OF THE EPIPHANY AT TRURO

Sleepy Cathedral Town in Cornwall, Where Titled Women Sometimes Find Rest.

SHE IS STILL A PRISONER

But Enjoys the Freedom of the Large Grounds Surrounding the Convent.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Maybrick is serving out the last few months of her life sentence for the killing of her husband in the quiet country home of the Sisters of the Epiphany at Truro, Cornwall, under an assumed name. She is guarded from communication with the outside world as jealously as if she were still in Aylesbury prison.

Though the fresh Cornwall air is bringing the color back to her cheeks, the strain of her fourteen years of imprisonment, commencing with the imposition of the death sentence, passed under the severe discipline of various prisons, is still evident in her careworn look. This, however, is the only outward sign she shows of her ordeal. Even the sisters, with whom she associates, and the servants have no idea that she really is Mrs. Maybrick.

She wears an ordinary black dress with a white frill at the throat. She occupies a pleasant, simply furnished room in the home, and rises at 6 o'clock each morning. Through a few agents in many ways, she is obliged to conform to the strict discipline of the convent. She takes her meals in silence, and is not allowed to converse except on religious topics during the day.

At tea time, when, for an interval, the sisters are permitted to talk of mundane things, Mrs. Maybrick retires to her own room. She must be in bed by 9 o'clock. No newspapers are given to her, but she is supplied with books. At first newspapers were surreptitiously supplied to her, but this was discovered and a severe reprimand followed. During part of the day Mrs. Maybrick works in silence in the sewing room, where the sisters make all their own clothing. Last Sunday she attended service in the Truro Cathedral and has been allowed to walk about the town accompanied by one of the sisters.

PASSES AS A VISITOR.

Mrs. Maybrick is supposed to be recovering from an attack of influenza and passes merely as one of many visitors to the sisterhood who pay for their accommodation. She will remain in charge of the sisters until she is released next July, though prior to that time, when the weather improves, she will be removed probably to a convalescent home under the same management, which is situated in one of the wildest spots of the Cornish coast.

In her present sanctuary Mrs. Maybrick appears to be comparatively happy. The changes from prison fare and discipline is almost as complete as the perfect freedom of the large, beautiful grounds surrounding the sleepy little cathedral town of Truro, where the breeze blows freely over the Cornish moors and coast.

Many members of the English aristocracy are inmates of the Epiphany convent. The superior of the sisterhood is the Hon. Miss Dalrymple, while several other sisters, under only their Christian names, conceal well-known patronymics.

The sisterhood of the Epiphany constantly resolves within its walls those women who wish to find a temporary rest from the world in a religious retreat, and hence Mrs. Maybrick's arrival caused no comment. She was driven from the Truro Railway station to the home in Miss Dalrymple's private carriage and reached the convent at nearly a fortnight. The acting mother superior is one of the few who know of the identity of the visitor, and she guards her from all interviews with a vigilance worthy an old-time abbess. This sister refused to convey a letter to Mrs. Maybrick from the representative of the Associated Press.

A rescue home for fallen girls and a laundry for their employment is carried on in connection with the Epiphany convent, and until now the sisters who knew of Mrs. Maybrick's identity have evaded inquiries regarding her by saying that she was not in the rescue home. This is correct, as Mrs. Maybrick has nothing to do with this department of the convent.

Mrs. Maybrick's somewhat anomalous status was explained as follows to the Associated Press representative by one of the chief officers of the Epiphany order: "Mrs. Maybrick is still a prisoner; she has not been released from her confinement, but in charge of her are her jailers and all communication with her is forbidden except through the home secretary."

These appear to be textually the official instructions which accompanied Mrs. Maybrick on her departure from Aylesbury prison. No prison warden is with Mrs. Maybrick, the sisters being implicitly entrusted with her safe keeping. This arrangement is generally regarded as constituting an unprecedented indulgence to a prisoner.

SAYS BIBLE IS VOID OF LITERARY MERIT

Prof. R. G. Moulton, of Chicago University, Likens the Old Version to a Scrap Book.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—The Bible was likened to a scrap book today by Prof. Richard G. Moulton, of the University of Chicago, in a lecture on "The Bible as Literature."

Professor Moulton said: "The old versions of the Bible present the book in one monotonous arrangement of numbers, chapters and verses, not distinguishing literary forms and often running counter to them. It effaces all forms of literary structure, and it presents the appearance not so much of a sacred book of revelations as of a disjointed scrap book in the world. It is well printed as regards type, printing and binding, but in all literary forms have been destroyed. The revised version is but a step in the direction of a new literary form, with which the version of the future will have to do."

But Will See that Commerce Is Not Interfered with by Either Nation.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The officials of the State Department are giving serious attention to the course the United States shall pursue in the event of war between Russia and Japan. There is little doubt among officials of the department that war will ensue and every precaution is being taken to see to it that the interests and all rights of this Nation in the vicinity of the proposed theater of war are fully protected. It is asserted that representations have been made to Russia that the present activity of the United States in Manchuria is solely for commercial purposes and for making effective the recent treaty between this Nation and China, and that on no account is it proposed by this government to establish any claims upon territory in that province, but that it will be content with the commercial foothold which the treaty ports of Mukden and Antung shall give. There is no doubt also that the construction of a dam in the Ohio river below Evansville, He spoke to the board of army officers who recently held hearings at Evansville and collected much data relative to the improvement of the Ohio. It will probably be several weeks before the board will submit its report to the secretary of war. Mr. Henryman also will make a report on the improvement of the Wabash to Vincennes.

The War Department will not reconsider its decision relative to the improvement of the upper Wabash river. The report of the local engineers that the lower stretch should be improved is expended on the upper Wabash is indorsed by the engineer officers.

A political conference was participated in at the White House today by the President, Senators Cullum and Hopkins, Representatives Lorimer and T. N. Jamison, of Illinois. There was some discussion between the administration and leaders in Illinois Republican politics and it is believed the conference was for the purpose of removing this, although no one was in charge of her are her jailers and all communication with her is forbidden except through the home secretary."

The Postoffice Department today announced that all rural free delivery carriers in the United States will have a holiday Feb. 22, Washington's birthday. There are approximately 20,000 of these carriers.

More Money Needed to Reimburse for Personal Property Stolen.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—In answer to a personal inquiry today from Senator Bate, the War Department, respecting the disbursements he has made so far to Confederate veterans, or, in case of their death, to the surviving members of their families, on account of horses, side arms and personal property taken from them by Union troops after the surrender at Appomattox, Quartermaster General Humphrey has replied that out of but twenty-four claims.

ROBERT J. WYNN, Who Testified at the Postal Fraud Trial Yesterday.

WYNN TESTIFIES IN THE LORENZ HEARING

Says He Suspected Machen Long Before He Had Any Proof on Which to Base Action.

HIS ACTS INVESTIGATED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Just before the postal trial was resumed today, Justice Pritchard held another conference with counsel on both sides. Mr. Kumler, representing the Lorenzes complained that he had received a letter intimating that improper proposals had been made to certain members of the jury, injurious to the defense. When the trial proceeded Mrs. Lorenz was briefly examined, her testimony relating solely to the identification of her signature on the back of four checks issued to her husband by D. B. Groff, D. F. Groff was recalled and produced a number of checks which had been asked for by the government, which he had drawn in payment for fasteners since any money was received by him from the government.

First Assistant Postmaster General Wynn was recalled. He admitted he had approved expenditures recommended in Machen's office of $10,332. Among the items was one for Groff fasteners, covering an expenditure of $8,632.

Questioned by Mr. Purdy for the government, Mr. Wynn said that his approval to the papers was based on Machen's initials. When he had his suspicions of Machen in December, 1902, that he (Machen) was not to be trusted, Mr. Wynn said he had no proof on which to base them. He was not to be trusted, Mr. Wynn said he had no proof on which to base them. He was not to be trusted, Mr. Wynn said he had no proof on which to base them.
